

Do some elites or movements support depopulation — quietly or not?

Description

Do some elites or movements support depopulation — quietly or not?

Yes, in the shadows of policy — though rarely called that:

- Through environmental Malthusianism: “Too many people, not enough resources.”
- Through selective policy neglect: Cutting public health programs or social safety nets knowing full well which populations will suffer.
- Through experimentation: Historically, there’s a dark record — from Tuskegee to forced sterilizations — where “health” was used to justify control or reduction.

RFK Jr.’s rhetoric around detoxing children, rejecting vaccines, and elevating “natural immunity” taps into those old, unscientific veins — and when implemented from a position of power, they do carry population-level consequences.

It’s not always a Bond villain with a red button — sometimes it’s slow, ideological erosion of protections that keeps the vulnerable... vulnerable.

Category

1. Commentary
2. Politics
3. Trumps Soldiers

Date

2025/07/21

default watermark